Trains Delayed.

The drifting snow of Tuesday and the night previous made the train schedules in this part of the state practically useless for a short time and passengers suffered many annoying delays. Four Vandalia trains were stuck at Lakeville all of Tuesday afternoon, unable to proceed or back out, and a Pennsylvania train spent several hours struggling through a drift near the county infirmary. The Lake Erie train due here at 5:15 from the south was delayed more than an hour between Plymouth and Argos and when it finally got away it faced the prospect of spending the night in the heaps of snow on the Kankakee prairies. All trains were late and all section men, with reinforcements of extra hands, were sent out with shovels to clear the tracks.

Fireman Took a Header.

A westbound train under orders to take the siding just east of Plymouth Saturday to pass another train ran by the switch, the engineer having misjudged the distance. It was placed on the siding in bare time to avert a collision. Del Ford, the fireman, thought a smash-up was inevitable and jumped from the engine. He struck his head on the ties and rolled under the train but saved his life by catching a cross bar, to which he held until the train was stopped. He was brought to Plymouth and found to be badly cut and bruised. After receiving temporary treatment he was sent to the hospital at Ft. Wayne on the early morning train.

To Alternate Rural Routes.

A new order will likely be made by the postmaster general which will remove what might be termed a discrimination against some farmers in regard to the delivery of their mail. At present the rural free delivery carriers regularly leave the postoffice by one route and return by another. As a consequence those who live near the end of the route receive their mail late every day. It is proposed to have the carriers start one day at the beginning of the route and the next day reverse the order of things by working it in the opposite direction.

Militia Ready For Muster.

The required number for the new militia company has now been signed, examined and accepted and the papers will go to the adjutant general next week. Kendall, who is in charge.

PLYMOUTH SOCIETY

Chicago Paper Speaks Highly of Our Social Life.

One of the most interesting little cities of northern Indiana in a social way is Plymouth. Situated in the midst of the Yellow River valley, it is noted for its streets of continuous shade, its surrounding lakes, affording pleasurable summer resorts, its flowing wells of pure water attracting tourists and visitors to its welcome hospitality. But it is not alone on these external surrounding that the city prides itself. Its younger people have given the city a reputation for social prestige that is surpassed by no other city of like size in this part of the state. Its young people, gifted in education, music and social qualities, give spur and enthusiasm to the city's life that keeps it always fresh, joyous and happy. Its young ladies are fine entertainers, its young men chivalrous escorts. It is noted for its singers and pianists of rare ability. The society here is genial and free from envious cliques. Parties and hops are frequent and handsomer women are not to be seen anywhere, and as for taste and skill in dress the town is exceptional.

The two leading clubs are the Bon Tons and the Peaceful Six. The first is composed of more than twenty young ladies, among whom are Mrs. Arthur O'Keefe, Miss Laura Sievers, Miss Mary Kendall, Miss Meta Kuhn, etc. Their socials are always delightful occasions.

The Peaceful Six is composed of Miss Emma Yockey, daughter of the postmaster; Miss Mary Brown, granddaughter of C. H. Reeve, whose articles on the single tax and other economic questions have been published in The Chronicle; Miss Florence Smith, daughter of Dr. J. W. Smith; Miss Bessie Allman, Mrs. Earl Corbaley and Miss Della Oglesbee, daughter of R. B. Oglesbee, editor of the Tribune.

Other clubs have limited memberships, with entertainments for exclusive friends.

Young ladies and gentlemen from other cities are frequent attendants upon the social events of these clubs. Bourbon, Argos, South Bend and Culver Military university and other places are represented, with the effect of widening the social influence and reputation of the beautiful city of Plymouth.—Chicago Chronicle.

Reading the Bible in Schools.

In answering a citizen of Lapaz, who thinks it is unconstitutional to read the Bible in the public schools, Attorney-General Taylor, after saying that no special dogma or creed may be taught, adds: "You will observe that the statute does not require the Bible to be read, and at the same time it does not prohibit the reading thereof. This has been the law of the state for many years, and has never, to my knowledge, been challenged in the Supreme court."
